

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a method for scanning microscopy a specimen, that contains at least one fluorescent dye, is illuminated with illuminating light. The detection light proceeding from scan points of the specimen is detected with a spectral detector that generates spectral data for each scan point. An amplitude value is determined from the spectral data for each fluorescent dye and transferred to a processing module.